BLEAK HOUSE.

BY CHARLES DICKENS.

CHAPTER XVII.—ESTHER'S NARRATIVE.

Richard's energy was of such an impatient and fitful kind, that he would have liked nothing better than to have gone to Mr. Kenge's office in that hour, and to have entered into articles with him on the spot. Submitting, however, with a good grace to the caution we had shown to be so necessary, he contented himself with sitting down among us in his lightest spirits, and talking as if nothing unwarying purpose in life from childhood had been that one which now held possession of him. My guardian was very kind and cordial with him, but rather grave; enough so to cause Ada, when he had departed and we were going up stairs to bed, to say:

"Cousin John, I hope you don't think the worse of Richard?"

"No, my love," said he.

"Because it was very natural that Richard should be mistaken in such a difficult case. It is not uncommon."

"No, no, my love," said he. "Don't look unhappy."

"O, I am not unhappy, cousin John!" said Ada, smiling cheerfully, with her hand upon his shoulder, where she had put it in bidding him good night. "But I should be a little so, if you thought at all the worse of Richard."

"My dear," said Mr. Jarndyce, "I should think worse of him, only if you were ever in the least unhappy through his means. I should be sincere disposed to quarrel with myself, even then, than with poor Dick. for I brought you together. But, tut, all this is nothing! He has time before him, and the race to run. I think the worse of him? Not I, my loving cousin! And not you, I swear!"

"No, indeed, cousin John," said Ada, "I am sure I could not—I am sure I would not—think any ill of Richard, if the whole world did. I could, and I would, think better of him then, than at any other time!"

So quickly and honestly she said it, with her hands upon his shoulders—both hands now—and looking up into his face, like the picture of Truth!

"I think," said my guardian, thoughtfully regarding her, "I think it must be somewhere written that the virtues of the mothers shall, occasionally, be visited on the children, as well as the sins of the fathers. Good night, my rosebud. Good night, my little woman. Pleasant slumbers! Happy dreams!"

This was the first time I ever saw him follow Ada with his eyes, with something of a shadow on their benevolent expression. I well remembered the look with which he had contemplated her and Richard, when she was singing in the firelight; it was but a very little while since he had watched them passing down the room in which the sun was shining, and away into the shade; but, his glance was changed, and even the silent look of confidence in me which now followed it once more, was not quite so hopeful and untroubled as it had originally been.

Ada praised Richard more to me, that night, than ever she had praised him yet. She went to sleep with a little bracelet he had given her clasped upon her arm. I fancied she was dreaming of him when I kissed her cheek, after she had slept an hour, and saw how tranquil and happy she looked.

For I was so little inclined to sleep, myself, that night, that I sat up working. It would not be worth mentioning for its own sake, but I was wakeful and rather low-spirited. I don't know why. At least I don't think I know. At least, perhaps I do, but I don't think it matters.

At any rate I made up my mind to be so dreadfully industrious that I would leave myself not a moment's leisure to be low-spirited. For I naturally said. "Esther! You to be low-spirited,—You!" And it really was time to say so, for I—yes, I really did see myself in the glass, almost crying. "As if you had anything to make you unhappy, instead of everything to make you happy, you ungrateful heart!" said I.

If I could have made myself go to sleep, I would have done it directly; but not being able to do that, I took out of my basket some ornaments of work for our house (I mean Bleak House) that I was busy with at that time, and sat down to it with great determination. It was necessary to count all the stitches in that work, and I resolved to go on with it until I couldn't keep my eyes open, and then to go to bed.

I soon found myself very busy. But I had left some silk down stairs in a work-table drawer in the passage Crowley's, and coming to a stop for want of it, I took my candle and went softly down to get it. To my great surprise, on going in, I found my guardian still there, and sitting looking at the ashes. He was lost in thought, his book lay unheeded by his side, his silvered iron-grey hair was scattered confusedly upon his forehead as though his hand had been wandering among it while his thoughts were elsewhere, and his face looked worn. Almost frightened by coming upon him so unexpectedly, I stood still for a moment: and should have retired without speaking, had he not, in again passing his hand abstractedly through his hair, seen me and started.

"Esther!"

I told him what I had come for.

"At work so late, my dear?"

"I am working late, to-night," said I, "because I couldn't sleep, and wished to tire myself. But, dear guardian, you too are late, and look weary. You have no trouble, I hope, to keep you waking?"

"None, little woman, that you would readily understand," said he.

He spoke in a regretful tone so new to me, that I inwardly repeated, as if that would help me to this meaning. "That I could readily understand!"

"Remain a moment, Esther," said he. "You were in my thoughts."

"I hope I was not the trouble, guardian?"

He slightly waved his head, and fell into his usual manner. The change was so remarkable, and he appeared to make it by dint of so much self-command, that I found myself again inwardly repeating, "None that I could understand!"

"Little woman," said my guardian, "I was thinking—that is, I have been thinking since I have been sitting here—that you ought to know of your own history, all I know. It is very little. Next to nothing."

"Dear guardian," I replied, "when you spoke to me before on that subject—"

"But since then," he gravely interposed, anticipating what I meant to say, "I have reflected that your having anything to ask me, and my having anything to tell you, are different considerations, Esther. It is perhaps my duty to impart to the little I know."

"If you think so, guardian, it is right."

"I think so," he rejoined, very gently, and kindly, and very distinctly, "and, Esther, I think so now. If any reason disadvantage can attach to your position, in the mind of any man or woman worth a thought, it is that you, at least, of all the world, should not magnify it to yourself, by having vague impressions of its nature."

I sat down; and said, after a little effort to be as calm as I ought to be. "One of my earliest remembrances, guardian, is of these words. 'Your mother, Esther, is your disgrace, and you were born.' The time will come, and soon enough when you will understand this better, as I should be too, as no one save a woman can." I had covered my face with my hands, in repeating the words; but I took them away now with a better kind of shame, I hope, and told him, that to him I owed the blessing that I had from my childhood to that hour never, never, never once thought of it. He put up his hand as if to stop me. I well knew that he was never to be thanked, and said no more.

"The worse, my dear," he said, after thinking for a little while, "have passed since I received a letter from a lady living in seclusion, written with a stern passion and power that rendered it unlike all other letters I have ever read. It was written to me (as it told me in so many words,) written to me (as it told me in the writer's idiosyncrasy perhaps, because it was to put that trust in me) perhaps, because it was going to justify it. It told me of a child, an orphan girl than twelve years old, in some such cruel words as those which live in your remembrance. It told me that the writer had bred her in secrecy from her birth, had blotted out all trace of her existence, and that if the writer were to die before the child became a woman, she would be left entirely friendless, nameless and unknown. It asked me, to consider if I would, in that case, finish what the writer had begun?"

I listened in silence, and looked attentively at him.

"Your early recollection, my dear, will supply the gloomy medium through which all this was seen and expressed by the writer, and the distorted religion which clouded her mind with impressions of the need there was for the child to expiate an offence of which she was quite innocent. I felt concerned for the little creature, in her darkened life; and replied to the letter."

I took his hand and kissed it.

"I laid the injunction on me that I should never propose to see the writer, who had long been estranged from all intercourse with the world, but who would see a confidential agent if I would appoint one. I accredited Mr. Kenge. The lady said of her own accord, and not of his seeking, that her name was an assumed one. That she was, if there were any ties of blood in such a case, the child's aunt. That more than this she would never (and he was well persuaded of the steadfastness of her resolution), for any human consideration, disclose. My dear, I have told you all."

I held his hand a little while in mine.

"I saw my ward oftener than she saw me," he added, cheerly making light of it, "and I always knew she was beloved, useful, and happy. She repays me twenty-thousand fold, and twenty more to that, every hour in every day!"

"And oftener still," said I, "she blesses the guardian who is a Father to her!"

At the word Father, I saw his former trouble come into his face. He subdued it as before, and it was gone in an instant; but, it had been there, and it had come so swiftly upon my words that I felt as if they had given him a shock. I again inwardly repeated, wondering, "That I could readily understand. None that I could readily understand!" No, it was true. I did not understand it. Not for many and many a day.

"Take a fatherly good-night, my dear," said he kissing me on the forehead, "and so to rest.—These are late hours for working and thinking.—You do that for all of us, all day long, little housekeeper!"

I neither worked nor thought, any more, that night. I opened my grateful heart to Heaven in thankfulness for its providence to me and its care of me, and fell asleep.

We had a visitor next day. Mr. Allan Wood court came. He came to take leave of us; he had settled to do so beforehand. He was going to China, and to India, as a surgeon on board ship. He was to be away a long, long time.

I believe—at least I know—that he was not rich. All his widowed mother could spare had been spent in qualifying him for his profession. It was not lucrative to a young practitioner, with very little influence in London; and although he was, night and day, at the service of gentlemen and poor people, and did wonders of gentleness and skill for them, he gained very little by it in money. He was seven years older than I. Not that I need mention it, for it hardly seems to belong to anything.

I think—I mean, he told us—that he had been in practice three or four years, and that if he could have hoped to contend through three or four more he would not have made the voyage on which he was bound. But he had no fortune or private means, and so he was going away.—He had been to see us several times altogether. We thought it a pity he should go away. Because he was distinguished in his art among those who knew it thoroughly, and some of the greatest men belonging to best, and some of the greatest men belonging to it, had a high opinion of him.

When he came to bid us goodbye, he brought his mother with him for the first time. She was a pretty old lady, with bright black eyes, but she seemed proud. She came from Wales; and had had, a long time ago, an eminent person for an ancestor, of the name of Morgan ap-Kerrig—of some place that sounded like Girdle—who was the most illustrious person that ever was known, and all of whose relations were a sort of Royal Family. He appeared to have passed his life in always getting up into mountains and fighting somebody; and a Bard whose name sounded like Crumblewallinwer had sung his praises, in a piece which was rather long, as nearly as I could catch it. Mrs. Woodcourt-Jellinwedd.

Mrs. Woodcourt, after expatiating to us on the fame of her great kinsman, said that, no doubt, wherever her son Allan went, he would remember his pedigree, and would on no account forget his alliance below it. She told him that there were many handsome English ladies in India who went out on speculation, and that there were some to be picked up with property; but that neither charms nor wealth would suffice for the descendant of so high a line, without birth; which must ever be the first consideration. She talked so much about birth that, for a moment, I had fancied, and with pain—but, what an idle fancy to suppose that she could think or care what mine was!

Mr. Woodcourt seemed a little distressed by her prolixity, but he was too considerate to let her see it, and contrived delicately to bring the conversation round to making his acknowledgments to my guardian for his hospitality, and for happy hours.

He called them the very happy hours—he had passed with us. The recollection of them, he said, would go with him wherever he went, and would be always treasured. And so we gave him our hands, one after another—at least, they did—and I did; and so he put his lips to Ada's hand—and to mine; and so he went away upon his long, long voyage!

I was very busy indeed, all day, and wrote directions home to the servants, and wrote notes for my guardian, and dusted his books and papers, and jingled my house keeping keys a good deal, one way and another. It was still busy between the lights, singing and working by the window, when who should come in but Caddy, whom I had no expectation of seeing.

"Why, Caddy, my dear," said I, "what beautiful flowers!"

She had such an exquisite little nosegay in her hand.

"Indeed, I think so, Esther," replied Caddy.—"They are the loveliest I ever saw!"

"Prince, my dear!" said I in a whisper.

"No," answered Caddy, shaking her head, and holding them to me to smell. "Not Prince!"

"Well, to be sure, Caddy!" said I. "You must have two lovers!"

"What? Do they look like that sort of thing?" said Caddy.

"Do they look like that sort of thing," I repeated, pinching her cheek.

Caddy only laughed in return: and telling me that she had come for me an hour, at the expiration of which time Prince would be waiting for her at the corner, sat chatting with me and Ada in the window: every now and then, handing me the flowers again, or trying how they looked against my hair. At last, when she was going, she took me into my room and put them in my dress.

"For me?" said I, surprised.

"For me," said Caddy, with a kiss. They were left behind by Somebody.

"Left behind?"

"At poor Miss Flite's," said Caddy. "Somebody who has been very good to her, was hurrying away an hour ago, to join a ship, and left these flowers behind. No, no! Don't take them out. Let the pretty little things lie here!" said Caddy, adjusting them with a careful hand, "because I was present myself and I shouldn't wonder if Somebody left them on purpose!"

"Do they look like that sort of thing?" said Ada, coming laughingly behind me, and clasping me merrily round the waist. "O, yes, indeed they do, Dame Durden! They look very, very like that sort of thing. O, very like it indeed, my dear!"

[END OF CHAPTER XVII.]

PENNSYLVANIA.—Extract of a letter written by a prominent ex-Member of Congress from Western Pennsylvania to a friend in Washington: "The fires of 1840 are kindling up in Pensylvania. We had yesterday, at Monroe, a grand and most enthusiastic meeting and torchlight procession thence to Uniontown as night. A number of Cass men came out, and declared themselves for Scott, while every Tyler man is ardently for him. You may set down the old Keystone for Scott by at least twenty thousand. His majority must, from every present indication, greatly exceed that of Gen. Taylor.

"As Pennsylvania goes, so goes, and so has gone, every Presidential election. And I should not be surprised if the Democratic candidates's known hostility to river and harbor bills, and other internal improvements, should give Scott all the Northwestern, while his British records (as elsewhere written, which his British friends delight to circulate with secrets in the Middle and manufacturing States. This will leave him some sixty or seventy electoral votes. "Fortune favors the brave," seems to be a true saying. Independently of all this, the same causes that elected Washington, Jackson, Harrison and Taylor, would elect Scott. Human nature and the principles of human action have been the same throughout all the ages of the world; and you might as well attempt to control the wind's, and the waves as to resist this, the offspring, not of phrenzy, but gratitude on the part of the people. It is the honest discharge of an obligation they owe to those who have risked their lives and (in Scott's case) shed their blood in their country's defence. I consider Scott's election 'a fixed fact.' Nothing but his death can prevent it."—National Intelligencer.

☞ Thirteen Democratic Campaign papers, the London Times, has a jewel of a correspondent in this City. He gives that journal some of the most extraordinary items of news ever concocted. Just before the Baltimore Democratic Convention, he sent off a letter announcing the most overwhelming enthusiasm on account of a speech just made by Gen. Cass, and the certainty of his nomination. He was equally sure that Mr. Webster was to be the whig candidate. In his last letter, dated July 26, commenting on the Fishery dispute he announces, with all the emphasis of italics, that "Our Government expects a collision; of this fact there can be no doubt." And he is equally oracular in his comments on political matters. In regard to the Whig gathering at Niagara Falls, he says:

"It was said, and supposed, that there would be at least 50,000 or 100,000 persons present on the anniversary of the first victory (as it is called) of General Scott: but up to the last evening less than 10,000 had assembled. Few distinguished men of the Whig party were there, and the whole thing was likely to prove a failure. The fact was no longer be concealed that the Whigs made a very unfortunate nomination, and no enthusiasm can be got up anywhere for General Scott. On the other hand, the mass meetings for PIERCE and KING are characterized by unprecedented enthusiasm and numbers.(!)—N. Y. Times.

IMPORTANT PLANK ROAD MOVEMENT.—Yesterday, we learned that the Rev. O. Tank, of Howard, subscribed $200 for the Stock of the Green Bay and Stevens' Point Plank Road Company.—This is the most important, and will be the most profitable Plank Road in Northern Wisconsin.—The distance is but 78 miles. It will open and attract hither the most valuable trade in the Northern portion of the State—the extensive Mills and sand Fisheries of the Upper Wisconsin. It is a low estimate to say that this trade will be worth $200,000 a year to Green Bay.

Now that the ball is started so handsomely, we do not imagine that there will be any difficulty in filling up the subscription. The people on the route and at Stevens' Point ought to subscribe $30,000 without difficulty. The stock will probably pay 25 per cent, per annum. Our citizens should take the balance.—Green Bay Spectator.

"CAN I VOTE?"—We were told of an incident which occurred in the Democrat office, which will do to repeat.

An honest Hibernian happened in there this morning, and in the course of his inquiries asked,

"Can I vote?"

"Certainly, certainly," replied the major domo in attendance.

"Well be jabers thin, its meself that's glad of that. I want to put in wan vote for Ould Scrott!"

"The primary question for the United States in the election, as it is for ourselves in the electoral contests of this week, is the national sanction, and indubitable establishment of Free Trade. The triumph of the candidate of the party of Free Trade, brought forward by the men of the South, Democratic party, brought forward by the men of the South, Democratic party, probably for ever, the ascendancy of liberal commercial principles. In this respect, and in this point, we take Gen. Pierce to be a fair representative of the opinions of Mr. Calhoun, and, as such, a valuable practical ally to the commercial policy of the country. Gen. Pierce is, therefore, a candidate for his success."—London (England) Times, July 6, 1852.

"When the Cid has crossed the Atlantic, he begins, for the first time in his life to consume the manufactures of his country, (England,) and indirectly to contribute to its customs revenue. He may possibly like to see the day when the staple produce of Ireland will be cattle, and that Irish and Scotch produce of Ireland will be cattle, and that Irish and Scotch capitalists, the majority of her population. This nine or ten millions of Irish, who by that time will have settled in the United States, cannot be less friendly to England, and will very likely become a much better customers to her than they now are."—London Times.

Whig Extravagance.

The Morning News takes to itself a false statement of the Indiana State Sentinel relative to the comparative expenditures of the present and the last administration. Omitting exclamation points—a pint or so of which are inserted for greater effect—the change is that while Mr. Polk's administration cost, in time of war, an average of $43,297,066 per annum, Mr. Fillmore's has cost $55,443,480 per annum.

Of course the News does not know anything about this, but does its duty by the party in copying and publishing all the reckless assertions it can lay hands on.

It might be easy enough to refute the charge at once by stating the fact that Mr. Polk's Administration footed bills for the war only during two years. It made the war, and contracted the debt, but left succeeding administrations to pay the shot. So, too, it would be easy enough to say that throughout this Whig administration the Loco Focos have had full control of both Houses of Congress, and of course could have corrected whatever evils might have existed. But we prefer to refer at once to the record, to answer, once for all, these slanders.

Year ending
June 30th, 1845,	$29,969,906,98
" " 1846,	28,031,114,00
" " 1847,	59,451,177,65
" " 1848,	54,195,275,66

Eight months of the first fiscal year mentioned were under Tyler's administration, the remainder, and all the rest of the years, under Mr. Polk's.—The only year of peace is shown to have cost over $28,000,000.

Year ending
June 30th, 1849,	$57,631,667,82
" " 1850,	43,009,163,59
" " 1851,	48,005,275,62
" " 1852,	45,750,000,00

Eight months of the fiscal year ending 30th June 1849 were under Mr. Polk's administration, the remainder under his successor.

Now the peace expenditure of Mr. Polk in the year ending June 30, 1846, was $26,690,774.—We take this year in comparison with the year ending June 30, 1851, the highest of the present administration, the figures being, as above, $48,005,275,62. Now deduct from this sum the amounts which arose from the Mexican War, and various other items which formed no part of Mr. Polk's expenditure, as the official record shows, and we have the following result:

Sum total - -	$48,005,275 62
Deduct war items - $10,954,484
Other items including census, collection of revenue, return of duties, &c., &c., 8,707,479
Expenses of the new Territories - 6,500,000	$26,161,963
Leaves - - -	$21,843,915 68

as the actual peace expenditure of Mr. Fillmore's administration in 1850-51, or actually less than Mr. Polk's least year, by nearly $5,000,000. As the expenditure for the last year is less by some millions than the year previous, the economy of the present administration is shown still more clearly.

This will do for the present, in answer to the attempt to blind the eyes of the people by such random statements as abound in the Loco Foco press. We only add that in regard to the precise charge as to the comparative cost of the two Administrations, making no account of the origin of the expenses, and taking the three years of each administration which refer to that one alone, the true comparison is seen by the above table to be as follows:—

Average of Mr. Polk's 3 years	$47,295,855 57
do do Fillmore's 3 years	45,556,015 75

The further the people look into the record, the more will they be disgusted with the foolish attempts of the Loco press to deceive them in this matter.

CAN IT BE POSSIBLE.—We have always regarded the Chicago Democrat, published by John Wentworth, as one of the few democratic papers which act, with reference to Western Improvements, independently of their party platform. The following, however, has a bad look. The member of the Democrat containing the article referred to did not reach us:

From the Chicago Journal.

The Democrat this morning breaks cover against Harbor Appropriations, and apologizes for the past course of the editor because "we of the West support them whilst our Eastern friends, view-solved to vote for no bills inconsistent with the national character."

The Democrat then copies a long article from the New Hampshire Patriot, which it pronounces "official," which sustains Mr. Pierce in the votes he gave against Harbor Bills!

To obtain the favor of his party and its support for Congress, we knew Wentworth had to make some concessions, but we did not think that he would fall full length before the Juggernaut of New Hampshire and join in the cry of "Down with Harbor Improvements!"

The Judicial Ticket.

The Janesville Standard, in an agony of mind relative to the resignation of Judge LARRABEE, exclaims:

For heaven's sake let this problem be solved, that the party may not unnecessarily risk a defeat which the whigs, throughout the states under any circumstances, know so well how to use to their advantage. If the Convention thought to make a tool of Judge Larrabee, to put Judge Hubbell out of the way, and Judge L. concludes to "stand the fire," and has complied with the requisitions of the convention, all of the gentlemen of the convention, who compose that body may not like to be "caught in their own trap;" but, nevertheless, to be consistent, they must support him, or others are not bound to support their nominations for side Judges. If it is not right to make a party matter in the election of Chief Justice, neither is it right to do so with reference to his associates.

Could this whole affair go by the board, that the officers for the separate Supreme Court might be elected without reference to party, we would cheerfully say amen to it. But we have "passed the Rubicon," and if Judge Larrabee is the regular nominee of the party, all true democrats are bound to support him.

FLATTERING.—The Locos are so much alarmed at the mountains of evidence collected and published, relative to the intolerant character of New Hampshire "Democracy," that they have had an affidavit manufactured at Concord, in that State, signed by some 30 or 40 persons, certifying to Mr. Pierce's opinions on the subject. These things can be got up without much trouble or expense generally, and men sometimes make very erroneous statements, in good faith, looking at matters through the medium of their prejudices. So in this case, an affidavit from 40 or 300 people in Concord won't make people believe that Mr. Pierce labored intensely in Convention to have the test abolished, while the record of the proceedings shows just the contrary.

But none of these things at all affect, nor does affect, nor does the affidavit undertake to deny, that, as shown by the table of votes, the Whig towns voted to abolish the test, and the Loco Foco towns to retain it.

A GOOD DEED.—At a meeting of Excelsior Lodge, No 20, I. O. O. F, held Aug. 26th, the sum of twenty dollars was donated to the relief of the emigrants now in this city, who were sufferers by the late disaster to the steamer Atlantic, and T. D. BUTLER, L. H. KELLOGG and A. J. LANGWORTHY were appointed to act in conjunction with a similar one already appointed by Milwaukee Lodge No. 2, to solicit further aid.

AN INTERESTING SPECTACLE.—JOHN C. WRIGHT, Comptroller of New York, and one of the Loco Foco State officers who pledged themselves in advance to carry out the Canal Enlargement Loan, and then basely violated their pledge after election, has been on a political pilgrimage through the State. At Seneca Falls, he made the statement that General Scott was not in the battle of Lundy's Lane at all.

VERY poor returns will be made in Western N. York from such investments.

RACINE RAILROAD COMMITTEE.—The following gentlemen are the Committee on the part of Racine to act with like Committees from the other Lake towns in furtherance of the Lake Shore Railroad enterprize:

J. R. Doolittle, Daniel Slauson, Charles S. Wright, Marshal M. Strong, R. M. Newell, H. S. Durand, E. Raymond, I. L. Ullman, E. R. Cooley, W. E. Wording, H. B. Cary, T. J. Emerson, W. T. Richmond, M. B. Mead, Chas. Herrick.

THE FISHERY DISPUTE.—The New York Tribune states that it has private information to the effect that the British Cabinet will change its course of action, and no longer seek to enforce the very stringent construction of the treaty which has been the sole ground of difficulty, and by which our fishermen were to be excluded from the bays and inlets of the coast.

It believes that despatches to that effect from Mr. Lawrence were brought by the Atlantic.

RAILROAD TO HUDSON'S BAY.—The Liverpool Chronicle states that an English Company have contracted to construct 100 miles of Railroad from Quebec towards Hudson's Bay, at £10,000 per mile, and that the line is intended to be pushed rapidly forward until it reaches the great Northern sea. The whole distance is 600 miles.

What do they want of a railroad in that frozen region?

BAD DOCTRINE.—The Monroe Sentinel, (democratic) publishes sundry extracts from an article in the American Whig Review, and exclaims against it terribly. One paragraph of the article is to the following effect:

It is necessary for him, (the farmer,) if he wishes to acquire for himself a competency, and for his sons an education, to have a near market for his produce; or if he cannot have that, at least good roads, and a safe inland navigation to convey it to those wealthier and more prosperous portions of the world, England and the Atlantic States, who have grown rich by tariffs.

We know very well that our "democratic" friends of the modern school, call that bad doctrine, but the people do not.

☞ We give the Milwaukee Sentinel notice, that at the next session of the Circuit Court we shall file a bill against the editors for slander. Among a list of Wisconsin papers, the Journal is set down Locofoco. Such errors are unpardonable.—Beloit Journal.

We come down at once—don't shoot! Of all the miserable blunders of the types, that is the worst. Send in your bill of damages, and we will fork over at once.

WHIG GATHERINGS.—The Scott men are moving in the North. The clans are gathering for the conflict. They rendezvous at Ceresco, Fond du Lac Co, on the 22d of September, and at Waupun on the 17th.

THE GRAND AFFAIR.—On the 23d, President Fillmore sent into the Senate a communication relative to this question. He argues in it the right of American vessels to load guano at the Lobos Islands, but says that official action in the premises is suspended at present.

☞ The Dodge county Whigs talk of having a mass meeting at Oak Grove, on the 14th of September, to celebrate the entrance of General Scott into the City of Mexico.

VOLUME VIII. MILWAUKEE DAILY SENTINEL. NEW SERIES.

DAILY SENTINEL.

Railroad---Adjourned Meeting.

THE MARKET HALL was crowded last evening, with a full representation of all classes of our citizens, to hear the report of the Committee on Resolutions, and to consider the important question of lending credit of the city to leading public enterprizes.

After the object of the meeting had been stated, E. B. GRANT, Chairman of the former meeting.—F. RANDALL Esq. from the Committee on Resolutions, reported the following

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS.

WHEREAS, The best interests of the city of Milwaukee imperatively demand such improvements as will increase the facilities of travel, transportation, and transaction of commercial business, and place her in direct and constant communication with eastern and southern markets, and

Whereas, her interests and convenience would be best subserved by the immediate construction of the Green Bay, Milwaukee and Chicago Railroad, and the Milwaukee and Fond du Lac Railroad, and

Whereas, the construction of these roads, in facilitating the development of the resources of an extensive and productive region of country, embracing a population of 250,000 inhabitants, represents property of the appraised value of $25,000,000, is of vital importance to the growth and prosperity of this city, and the eastern and northern portion of Wisconsin, and

Whereas, These roads, taking into consideration the natural advantages and facilities of the country for construction, the densely populated and flourishing condition of the counties, cities, and villages through which they will pass, and the direct communication that they will open from the northern and north-western portions of our State, through its most thriving towns, with an eastern market, offer inducements to capitalists that are rarely equalled; therefore,

Resolved, That in an enterprise of so much importance, and fraught with so many prospective benefits not only to our city but the section of country now and to be, dependent upon it, we will unite all our energies.

Resolved, That the several counties, cities and villages through which these roads will pass have a common interest in their construction, and we invite them, and will use all honorable means to induce them to join us in lending their credit and co-operation to the utermost; and will exemplify by them that we are determined to assist by every means in our power, (individually and collectively) in its prosecution and rapid completion.

Resolved, That as these roads will be remunerative of the cost of their construction and will enhance the value of our property, and increase our commercial advantages, we are in favor of lending the credit of our city to aid in their construction by the virtue of City Bonds to the following amounts, viz :—Not exceeding $200,000 to the Green Bay, Milwaukee and Chicago Railroad Co., and not exceeding $200,000 to the Milwaukee and Fond du Lac Co.,—upon such terms as may be arranged between the Common Council and the companies organized for the construction of said roads.

Resolved, That our Common Council be requested to fix an early day for determining, by a vote of the people of the city whether this substantial aid shall be afforded towards the construction of these roads.

The report was accepted, and the Committee discharged.

LEVI BLOSSOM, Esq., being called for, addressed the audience.

He regretted that he was not present at the former meeting, but he was absent on a mission—a good mission—relative to this same enterprise. After some remarks relative to the manner in which he, like thousands of others, had come and made their home in Wisconsin at an early day, he proceeded to point out the advantages which our state holds over other Western States, for the prosecution of public improvements of a remunerative character. (A map hanging upon the wall back of the speaker, having the various proposed Roads traced upon it concerning in Milwaukee, was referred to by the speaker, as showing better than any thing else could do, the importance of these enterprises to our city.) He narrated, in his own wide-awake style, the manner in which he had gone among capitalists in New York, and among the people of the lake towns south of us, to excite an interest in the railroad project. Excellent meetings were held at Racine and Waukegan, and resolutions were passed, and a resolution shown, to take hold and help the Lake Shore Railroad enterprise. He went to Chicago, and found every body talking about railroads—railroads. This was what Milwaukee must do—she must talk railroads, and not only that, she must do railroads.

Referring to the map, Mr. BLOSSOM rapidly and ably sketched the characteristic advantages of the region into which the various projected roads centering here—the Lake Superior mines—the vast lumbering country north west of us, and the rich territory beyond—drawing the conclusion that this city has a future before it, if it will only grasp it, surpassed by no other city in the West. If the people of our city have been asleep thus far, they ought not to sleep any longer, but to TAKE HOLD AND WORK now and henceforward.

BYRON KILBOURN Esq., followed in support of the resolutions. He considered the most important enterprise now before our people the Lake Shore Railroad, particularly, at this moment, that part of it between this city and Chicago. The extension of the eastern road, to the latter city had largely increased her population, wealth and prosperity. The like extension here would have the like effect.

After referring to the various railroads as traced on the map, as calculated if completed to concentrate the business of the country northwest of us in Milwaukee, Mr. Kilbourn stated his belief that there is no other town in the north west which has the opportunity to secure to itself such an amount of business as this same city of Milwaukee has, if its citizens will only take hold of their interests and determine to secure them.

He proceeded to demonstrate that we are fully competent to the work—we have the ability if we only have the will—and did this by entering into some nicety of calculation, proving his position clearly, from the easy terms upon which capitalists from abroad can be induced to come and build the road. Only one quarter of the capital stock of either of these roads would be demanded as our part; the remainder would be readily taken in bonds of the roads and other stock. He showed that the idea of there being anything terrible in the fact of advancing its credit was a bugbear. The city could lose nothing, and would absolutely make a handsome money operation out of it. Seven per cent bonds of this road to run 20 years with the guarantee of the city would sell at a premium in New York. The more the subject is investigated, the better will the people be assured that the advancement of the credit of the city would not only be safe, but profitable. And not only this, vast amounts of money are to be paid out here, and flow into all the channels of business.

Mr. KILBOURN closed his interesting remarks by alluding, in very strong language, to the importance of the La Crosse Railroad to the city, and to the manner in which the various roads connect with each other in the 200 miles next northwest of us,—and proposed an amendment inserting the La Crosse road in the preamble.

Before the motion was put, Dr. JAS. JOHNSON addressed the audience. He thought, in the attempt to do too much, the whole project might fail. He thought it might be prejudicial to the success of the appeal to the people if they were asked too much, and hence only he opposed the amendment. He believed firmly that the people would never be called upon to pay a cent towards the bonds, not even for the interest. So it was with the Milwaukee and Mississippi R. R.—the interest on those bonds had been met promptly and honestly, and the city not called upon for any tax. He concluded by asking the withdrawal of the amendment.

Mr. KILBOURN replied by expressing his belief that if any change is to be made, the La Crosse R.R. should have aid in preference to the Fond du Lac Road, because the first would bring us within 90 miles of Fond du Lac, and that that link could be built by the people on the line.

Ex-Mayor WALKER followed, advocating ably the enterprise generally. He believed that the primary and present object of our citizens must now be to build the Lake Shore road south, and thus set the example for the counties north to help themselves. He believed in the Fond du Lac road, as cutting off the project of the builders of the Rock River U. V. R. R. since we are on by far the shortest line beteen Fond du Lac and Chicago. He opposed Mr. Kilbourn's amendment.

F. RANDALL Esq., explained the sentiments of the committee on resolutions relative to this question. They had agreed upon the resolutions as presented, unanimously. The main point now was to decide whether the city would help the roads, and the committee thought that $400,000 would be a safe amount to recommend to the Common Council through the meeting.

He deprecated any conflict of opinion between the particular friends of different roads.

Mr. BLOSSOM hoped that the first and most important project would not be loaded down with amendments. He said that he had in his pocket a proposition from responsible persons to build the Lake shore road in 18 months, for $1100,000, completed and furnished—the parties to take one quarter in stock, and one quarter in bonds of cities and villages on the line, running 20 years, and the balance in the bonds of the company. Here was a practical proposition, which ought to be looked to, and considered, and acted on.

He agreed with Col. WALKER in the necessity of the Fond du Lac road, and the particular necessity of going first at work at the first project, the Lake Shore Road. He added that if the city would vote to back the bonds of the company by the 1st of February, 1853, to the amount proposed, the company of which he before spoke would take hold and commence work by the 1st of October of this year. That was the way to do it.

The question was taken on amending the preamble so as to include the La Crosse Railroad, and after being taken three times was declared carried in considerable doubt.

Mr. BOOTH said in a few remarks, that what we want is a road from Fond du Lac to Chicago through Milwaukee. This is what Milwaukee must labor for.

The question was called for on the resolutions The first one carried almost nem. con. The second ditto. The question was taken first as to the Lake Shore R. R. in the 3d resolution, and carried. Mr. KILBOURN moved to amend by making the sum $100,000 for the Mil. and Fond du Lac R. R., but withdrew it, and the whole resolution carried. Also the fourth, and the set of resolutions as a whole.

On motion of Mr. Blossom, the chair appointed a committee of 15, 3 from each Ward, to confer with committees from other cities, to forward these objects.

On motion of Mr. Foote, a Committee of 15 on Vigilance was ordered.

On motion, it was requested that the proceedings be published in the papers of the city, and also in the papers in the towns along the line.

Hon. MOSES M. STRONG, although extremely hoarse, made a few remarks, which were well received, relative to the manner in which, through his long service in the Legislature, he had always stood by the true interests of Milwaukee, and to the importance of La Crosse road. He promised that this project should soon be properly presented to the people of Milwaukee.

He believed that the city would not hazard anything, but secure a great good, even if it extended its credit to a million. "Take hold of the work in earnest—extend your iron arms to the vast country near and beyond the Mississippi, and secure the trade of this region, and a growth and prosperity beyond parallel."

The Chair announced the following committee on Correspondence :—

Whig Convention at Boston.

Boston, Monday, Aug. 24.

The Whig Ward and County Convention met this evening at Cochituate Hall. A rumor that the Webster Whigs would rally in force, and attempt to control the proceedings, called out a large meeting. A vote, considered a test, showed a majority of about 70 for Scott. The proceedings were harmonious, and 139 delegates, composed of both Webster and Scott men, were chosen delegates to the State Convention at Worcester.

Excitement in the Fire Department of Buffalo.

Buffalo, Monday, Aug. 23.

There is considerable excitement in this City in consequence of a serious disturbance in the Fire Department. In the new Charter for the City, the Convention have resolved to make the Chief Engineer's office electable by citizens instead of by the Department. This caused much feeling, and I am well informed that it is the intention of the Companies to-morrow to march to the Liberty poles, tie up the engines, and distand every Company.

The selection of WINFIELD SCOTT for President and WILLIAM A. GRAHAM for Vice-President, has gratified our earliest wishes and strengthened our earnest hopes. Each confidence has long been fixed that Gen. Scott is the very man fitted and marked out by his heroic achievements—his inestimable services, at critical periods, in preserving our National tranquility and preventing the effusion of blood—by his unquestioned integrity, his self-devoting patriotism, his unsectional position and his humanity—to unite the Whig Masses in one enthusiastic, invincible host and lead them on to victory. So believing, we have labored and hoped for his nomination, and we now confidently look to the result to justify our sanguine anticipations.

This Journal, standing on its own Platform and knowing no other authority but truth, will do its utmost for the election of SCOTT and GRAHAM; but it will not be absorbed by Political discussion. We have chosen to prefer Campaign subscribers a large share, rather than a small and cheaper one, because the postage is the same, and because we wish to extend the knowledge of what THE TRIBUNE habitually is. The letters of our Associate, BAYARD TAYLOR, who next writes us from Syria, the ruins of Nineveh, Constantinople, &c., will appear every week, with reviews of new Books, Literary Gossip and Criticism, the General News of the Day. If there is another Journal in America more valuable or interesting than THE TRIBUNE, it is not because more money or labor is spent thereon.

All the Editions of THE TRIBUNE are printed in large Quarto form, on a sheet 31 by 46 inches, showing eight large and compact pages of reading matter. About half the Daily is devoted to Advertisements, very few of which appear in our other issues. No ten cents daily in the world contains more reading matter than THE TRIBUNE, which is afforded at $5 per annum, or 21½ for three months.

SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE:
One copy (per annum) $3; Two do. $5; Ten do. $20.
WEEKLY TRIBUNE:
One copy (per annum) $2; Clergy do. $1; 5 do. $10; Twenty-five (to one address) $20.

☞ Payment is in all cases required in advance.

Subscriptions for THE CAMPAIGN TRIBUNE, or either of our regular issues, are respectfully solicited. All notes of specie paying banks taken at par and may be remitted at our risk. Please address

THE SUBSCRIBER PLACED HIS FIRE AND BURGLAR-Proof Iron Safe in competition with the whole world at the great Exhibition in London, for which an impartial jury awarded a medal.

The American Fair, held last fall at Castle Garden, also awarded to him a gold medal for the best Fire-Proof Safe, and he has never failed to obtain the highest premium when his Safe has been put in competition with others for that purpose. Certificates have been received from the following well-known merchants, who have had their books, papers and money preserved in these superior Safes within the last thirty days, (and one, with many others, he seen at my store,) viz. Messrs. Silliman & Morgans, and Mr. J. L. Watkins, in the Fulton Street fire; Messrs. Fisher & Robinson, and Messrs. John Lockwood & Co., in the great fire on Commercial street; Messrs. Nesbit & Co., and Messrs. Proud & Bowman, in Jersey City.

I am the proprietor of HALL'S PATENT LOCK, which obtained a medal (in the name of Adams & Co., Boston,) at the World's Exhibition, and is considered the best Lock for the price, ever invented, being proof against powder, and the Key is no larger than a cent, and can be made changeable.

I invite all purchasers to a close and careful investigation before purchasing, and decide for themselves, who makes the best Fire, Burglar and Damp-Proof Safes combined.
